THE ADMINISTRATION AND ITS WORK.

In the eight months of Republican rule Mr. Harrison and his backers. great council chiefs of the G. O. P. and men of might in finance have succeeded in making such a bad record that the first elections have recognized the character of it and the men, and the people have uttered this emphatic decree: That the American people will that they also see the contrast between and the piratical policy of Harrison and Upon this text the wayfaring man if not a tramp, may argue the fate of the Republican party, unless it seeks and finds refuge in that chronic Democratic blunder which has so often given the Radicals a haven of rest when the popular storm was about to whelm them in the depths of ocean. Let us see where the chart shows us the way to a great rescue in 1892:

In the first place the Cleveland idea is already demonstrated as having ed it to grow, but so strongly that to-day it towers above the fallacies and rogue. ries of the Republicun party like a tall that the verdict of the American people is against taxation to support monopoly and shut up the markets of the world to our consumers and our country of creative and mechanical genius heading the march of the age of mechanism, should have raw materialfree of duty, so that our products of in dustry can compete on fair terms with the workers of the rest of the world in the markets of the world. This being the national issue against the party of high taxes for protection of monopoly, the next thing is to clear the front of the line for the great battle of 1892, that is as certainly ours as that the sun will rise, if We from the blunder that alone beat us in

That blunder was the leadership of Mesars. Carlisle, Mills and others, who put the majority of the committees is the hands of Southern Democrats. The people of the South admire those men, but the hard fact is that every time they lead the North flaunts the bloody shirt and gives us to defeat. The time is not ripe for Southern leadership. We people of the South want peace and prosperity, and they want the Northern Democrats to puthe party on a national issue as we have warned it, and not allow the Radicals to force us on the bayonets that impaled us twenty five years ago.

This may not be sentiment and ro mance, and it will not suit the politi cian's idea of personal politics, but t saits the spirit of the people, and it is the road to victory, to peace and pros

REJECTED OF ALL MEN.

One of the most remarkable of the minor features of the late election was the fact that the pretensions of Mahous were rejected not only by his native State as a whole, but also by the city in which he resides, by the county in which he was born, and, above all, by the preciact within the boundaries of which he first saw the light. It is no exaggeration of language to refer to him now as the outcast, for at this moment he is an outcast in every sense of that terrible word. His State has thrown him off in horror as a son too los to all honorable instincts to deserve even maternal consideration. Indeed. she will never cease to lament the hour that she gave him birth. The people of the town where he has lived, his very justice. neighbors in whom daily association it would have been supposed, would have cultivated unconsciously a partisan feeling in his behalf, declined to lend him the slightest countenance. The very spot where he began his existence discards him with all the deeper scorn because his nativity casts on it the shadow of disgrace. Could we possibly conceive of a more forlorn and dishonored position than

NORTH. The principal obstructions to a wholly ntrammeled franchise, with which our American system of suffrage has bad to contend, have been bribery and intimidation. Intimidation has prevailed to a more or less extent from the time that our suffrage has been based upon since the Republican party have been compelled to employ every iniquitous means to maintain their position, owing to the decline in that sectional bitter es co ness upon which they still rely so much for support. So frightful has become the evil influence of both bribery and intimidaion in the North, that all the States in that division of the Republic, whether ontrolled by one party or the other. are one after another gradually adopting the secret system of voting known as the Australian, or rather as the Australasian, as it originated, we believe. tion throughout the most important of the British dependencies in the South Sees. The most recent of the States to fall into the line of ballot reform is Massachusetts. The report as to the working of the new method of voting in the late election in that Commonwealth is most favorable in every repect. It is endorsed by the most unreserved popular approval, and the testimony of all the witnesses of every hade of opinion is, that practically i puts an end to interference and espionage at the polls. One of the most distinct and gratify ing effects of the operation of the law so far, has been a most remarkable renot stand boodle politics, nepotism and duction in the Republican voting contempt of the civil service rules, and strength in all the great manufacturing districts of the North, particularly in the honest administration of Cleveland New England. In these districts the peratives in the factories have been very much influenced in their political action hitherto by their fear of offend ng their employers. AFTER THE BATTLE.—It is now eight months since Mr. Harrison assumed control of the Federal government.

The elections just over are the first that have occurred under his administration. The fact, therefore, that the Democratic vote has increased in nearly ill sections, and to such an extent that it may be compared to a tidal wave, is is interesting as it is suggestive.

The Republicans will of course stoutly teny that it is a sign of the trend of aublic opinion, and repudiate the allegation toat it can be regarded as the popular versict on the administration, out even they must admit that the coincidence is sufficiently remarkable to demand explanation.
